Auto-repair Tool Makers in Taiwan Making Their Mark Globally

One supplier set out to turn around negative stereotype 18 years ago

Sound Han's own "Hans" brand is a reputable name for sockets in Europe and Japan

By STEVE CHUANG

Years ago, as Japanese cars in the 1970s, Taiwan-made exports, as confirmed by a local supplier recently, were often the object of taunts and jibes in movies and real-life, targeted by foreign users as examples of poor quality and design; but such negative stereotyping generally does not apply today to Taiwan-made exports, at least not automotive repair tools.

After decades of earnest industry and technical help offered by officially-backed agencies such as the Metal Industrial Research & Development Center and Taiwan Regional Hand Tools Association, Taiwan makers of auto repair and hand tools are proud to stamp "made-in-Taiwan" on their wares. In fact insiders will agree that Taiwan deserves the title "Kingdom of Hand Tools," especially when local suppliers have significantly progressed in controlling product quality, R&D capability, and branding, able now to turn out tools as good as those from major global brands, but with an enviable edge: competitive pricing.

R&D Focused

One auto-repair tool supplier that has remained truly professional to offer personalized services for 30 years is Infar Industrial Co., Ltd., established in 1978 in Changhua County, central Taiwan.

Infar is a major supplier in the line in Taiwan, running two factories in Taiwan and another in China, hiring 700 workers overall. The company offers a wide range of wrenches, ratchet wrenches and sockets on an OEM (original equipment manufacturer) and ODM (original design manufacturer) basis, with a moderate portion sold under its own INFAR, ProGear and GearTech brands.

Terence Chen, product manager, says that the company has consistently acquired state-of-the-art production technologies via close cooperation with the government-funded Metal Industries Research & Development Centre (MIRDC) and domestic colleges. For example, the company recently introduced innovative, eye-catching colors on its wrenches and ratchets, an idea originated with Chen's plan to give Infar wrenches individual, stylish features to build popularity, especially with younger North American users.

Jin Xiang Kai is noted for its line of Pard-branded auto repair tools featuring two-toned colors

Equally remarkable is Infar's commitment to quality and service, which puts it a head above the competition globally. "Infar is fully responsible for quality with our life-time warranty. For example, a customer once returned a used wrench that was bought from us at least 10 years earlier, which had completely worn out from extensive use," Chen says. "We unhesitatingly replaced it with few new ones for free, which may sound incredible but is our way to offer the best service."

To enhance added-value of products, Infar also designs packaging. With an in-house team of R&D engineers, the company can develop economical and practical packaging that help the company and customers to cut cost and reduce material waste. Furthermore, the company works with four other suppliers in the line to offer one-stop shopping services for foreign buyers.

Chen's commitment to professionalism may be inspired by the Japanese as he believes in achieving the spirit of "Shyou," which means a devoted, respectful master or seasoned expertise in Japanese. Such belief helps the company to religiously offer top-notch quality and service, which has enhanced corporate profitability.

Trustworthy Name

Reality is that branding or brand-building is difficult, time-consuming for most Taiwan auto-repair tool makers, which are hindered by size and resource limitations. Sound Han Industrial Co., Ltd. has proven to be an exception: successfully building a globally popular private brand "Hans" by improving product quality in the long-term.

Founded in 1973 in Taiwan's central city of Taichung, Sound Han started up as an OEM maker of only sockets. After over three decades, the company has become a competent ODM (original design manufacturer) and OBM (original brand manufacturer) as well as diversified its product line, including spanner wrenches, hand sockets, impact sockets and accessories, air impact wrenches, hex key wrenches, screwdrivers and bits, pliers, locking pliers and roller tool chests and cabinets, over 90% of which are exported.

Changing Negative Stereotype

M.H. Chang, PR Director, says that embarrassment inspired his company to turn around the Taiwan-made image some 18 years ago, when Sound Han tried to impress foreign buyers with its products but was hobbled by the negative stereotype: that Taiwan-made goods were some of the worst globally; and ever since the company has been trying to improve product quality.

The dedication has born fruit: Chang says that, regardless of prohibitive R&D costs, the company effectively improved the durability of its interchangeable impact-wrench adaptor, making it 20 times as tough as counterparts. Also, the company's spark plug sockets are so precisely sized that buyers praise them highly and are recommendable for use on Japanese cars. Sound Han's tools are so durable and of high quality to be particularly well-received among professional European users.

Sound Han deserves special mention for being zealously dedicated. Chang says that the company did not give up on improving a conventional, unprofitable wrench that a client had returned, regardless of faulty use.

"The house brand Hans is a German, masculine name for we hope to evoke in customers trust, that a Taiwan brand can be as good as a German one," Chang says. "However, we discovered that building trustworthiness in a brand has to be based on a steady emphasis on R&D and product improvement."

Touch-sensitive Maker

If nothing else, Jing Xiang Kai Ind., Co., Ltd. is able to offer high-end, cool auto repair tools featuring comfortable grip and superb finish that are marketed under the Pard brand.

Officially established in 2007 in Taichung County, central Taiwan, Jing Xiang Kai, with more than 30 years in auto-repair tool making, is a "seasoned newcomer" in the line on the island, turning out a variety of sockets, screw-drivers, wrenches and pneumatic tools, most of which are sold under its own Pard brand small portion on OEM basis.

Cosda's coil spring compressor.

Bright finish and comfortable grip enhance added-value of Jin Xiang Kai's tools.

Realizing the importance of product differentiation when branding, Jin Xiang Kai has emphasized more so-called feel and touch of auto-repair tools than most Taiwan peers. "In addition to improving torque rating and durability, we also try to impress users with color contrast in Pard-branded tools," says company president T.S. Lin. "Distinct color contrast not only makes a wrench stand out but also—by being a size indicator—helps users with quick identification."

The company says that its Pard-branded auto-repair tools are all two-toned in either red-and-black or red-and-white on metal parts and plastic handles, which help to show size, coupled with smooth, bright finish, also make such products more visible on shelves.

Jin Xiang Kai believes good color contrast, which requires costly surface treating to prevent peeling, also effectively enhances added-value, as it helps users with easy size identification, hence achieving better work efficiency. "In short, Pard-branded auto repair tools satisfy users' demand for a comfy-to-hold, easy-to-use tool," Lin says.

The company continues to diversify its line: now trying to apply new design concepts to develop a series of own-branded roller tool cabinets and chests, which will, according to Jin Xiang Kai, also differ from competing models in functionality. Scheduled to be launched soon, these tool chests will help to offer more choices to buyers.

Successful Diversification

One company that has shown upgrading production capability works is Cosda Manufacturing Company, established in 1978 in Taichung County, central Taiwan. The company began by offering metalworking services and later on branched into production and development of auto repair tools. The company's strong know-how in metalwork clearly facilitated its diversification. Cosda runs an integrated factory turning out a wide range of tools for repairing engines, shock absorbers, radiators and braking systems.

Billy Liu, sales manager, stresses that despite being seen as a competent OEM initially, Cosda was not content but aspired to go up-market via capability upgrades to become an ODM. With years of in-house R&D, her company successfully built Taiwan's first twisted socket demanded by a European client. She adds that "Cosda's in-house capability related to material application and thread structure measured up to the client's expectations, so we won the order. Above all, no other supplier could produce such sockets, except Cosda."

With excellent versatility, Liu says, Cosda has developed engine pressure gauges and coil spring compressors, which all feature user-friendly, easy-to-operate functions and superb quality and durability. Surprisingly, the company is also skilled in developing non-hazardous chemicals to test for leaks in radiators.

Due to our focus on upgrading production capability, Liu reveals, Cosda has even received orders for aircraft repair tools. "Such tools need even more advanced technology to produce and require stricter certifications than auto repair tools," she adds. Landing orders to produce aircraft repair tools reflects the company's long-term effort on honing production capability.

"Many years of capability upgrades have turned Cosda from follower into leader in the line," Liu says. "Our only aim is to outdo ourselves every second." CENS

Chang Loon Renowned for Top-end Wrench Supplier from Taiwan

Slim-head and lightweight are product-differentiation features

Compiled by STEVE CHUANG

Chang Loon Industrial Co., Ltd. believes that the development of wrenches has not yet reached its apex, despite their evolution over hundreds of years of use, and has constantly worked to add more value to its wrenches ever since its establishment in 1978.

The company has been developing and producing hand tools for almost 30 years, and is today one of the top makers of its kind on the island. Starting out in business as an OEM (original equipment manufacturing) producer, the company has accumulated a rich store of metalworking know-how and claims to be Taiwan's largest exporter of wrenches.

A single-minded focus on quality improvement, with a constant expenditure of time and money on improving production capability and introducing advanced inspection techniques and equipment to keep the defect rate to a minimum, has contributed to Chang Loon's success. With products that exceed international standards such as ANSI and DIN in terms of durability and torque, the company has built a strong image among international buyers.

Practical R&D

What really sets the company apart from its Taiwanese counterparts is its dedication to enhancing the value of seemingly mundane wrenches through extensive R&D. In developing a new product, the firm always makes sure that it truly meets the needs of users. Each manager and supervisor takes an active part in every R&D decision to assure that it is properly carried out in line with the latest information and market trends.

Besides, the company's tests of newly-developed hand tools are based on user feedback and real experiences; rough edges that are discovered in actual use are repeatedly smoothed out until the new tools are perfect and ready for launch. This process may be costly, the company says, but it gains the respect and trust of clients.

Chang Loon's constant fine-tuning process makes sure that its ratchet wrenches are function-oriented. All of the wrenches are made of high-grade chrome vanadium, and are hot drop-forged and heat-treated for prolonged life and a good appearance. A built-in, precise 72-tooth ratchet mechanism that took a great deal of time and resources to develop enables the wrenches to outperform competing models.

With the improved ratchet mechanism, each small turn of the wrench moves precisely through five degrees, allowing users to work in confined spaces and making the wrench more efficient and energy-saving. The company claims that its ratchet wrenches are perfect for auto repair, plumbing, and machine maintenance. Their sophisticated structural design and extremely precise tolerance help make these wrenches extremely practical.

Value Enhancement

Chang Loon is also known for providing another surefire solution for value enhancement: packaging. According to Chang, the company is inspired by new trends in different fields, including fashion and stationery, to design eye-catching, practical packaging. This has proven successful in increasing the marketability of products on the shelves of retail stores and wholesalers.

The company keeps its eye on the growing global concern for environmental protection, and is designing materials-efficient packaging made of reprocessed corrugated paper without any ecologically harmful materials. This packaging is especially popular with European buyers.

In addition to offering innovative design and eye-catching packaging, Chang Loon has also taken steps to differentiate its hand tools. For example, the heads of its ratchet wrenches are thinner and lighter than those of competing models, making them readily recognizable. Another patented design that is incorporated into the ratchet wrenches is a colored ring embossed on the head that clearly shows the size of the wrench in Imperial or metric units.

Chang Loon attributes its solid reputation in Europe, Southeast Asia, Latin America, Canada, and the United States to persistent hard work on R&D. The company considers devotion to R&D as its bread and butter, and its only route to survival in the increasingly competitive and challenging market.

Chang Loon supplies a verity of combination and ratchet wrenches that meet DIN standards.

Chang Loon's 72-tooth gear wrench features each turn at surefire 5 degrees to attain effortless operation and torque accuracy.
